DETROIT NEGRO STARTS TO PREPARE FOR WINTER

DETROIT, July 25—The thermometer registered 98.

That may have been the reason.

But Charles James, 31, a Negro, did not use the heat as an excuse.

In fact, he had no explanation to offer today.

So he will be sentenced next week for theft.

There was no secret in the fact that American officials in Havana are especially apprehensive lest the Argentine delegation try to weaken the effect of the conference by seeking adoption of innocuous declarations—the type Hull specifically does not want.

TRIO KILLED AS FUEL EXPLODES AT RESORT FARM

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., July 25—Explosion of a gasoline storage tank at a resort farm near Benton Harbor today claimed three lives and injuries to six persons.

Dead were Henry Kading, 36, of Cassopolis, Mich., who was feeding patented gas into the tank; Miss Pauline Luban, 50, of Chicago, a cook; and Mrs. Clara Schwartz, 52, wife of the resort owner.

U. S. Jury Hits 'I Am' Cult as Major Racket

LOS ANGELES, July 25—Accused of operating a gigantic religious racket described by federal authorities as one of the most cold-blooded and ruthless frauds on record, 24 leaders of the fabulous "I Am" cult were under indictment today in Los Angeles on mail fraud and conspiracy charges.

Return of the true bill climaxed many months of intensive investigation by special government agents who declared the case involved huge sums of money, loss of savings by aged folk, the shattering of hundreds of homes and a "whole-sale hypnotism of the cultists."

Acting U. S. Attorney William Fleet Palmer, who, with his aides, presented the case to the federal grand jury, said the "I Am" movement had collected possibly $3,000,000 since its inception in 1930.

Defendants named in the indictments were:

Mrs. Edna W. Ballard, alias St. Germinal, alias Jesus, alias Joan of Arc, alias Lotus Ray King. She is the widow of Guy W. Ballard, founder of the movement who died last December 29.

Edona Eros Ballard, 22, alias Donald Ballard, their son, who is currently engaged in a divorce battle with his pretty blonde wife, Marjorie.

ROMANIA READY FOR LAND SPLIT

Delegates On Way To Meet Nazi Envoys, Learn Fate As Planned By Hitler

BUDAPEST, July 25—Predictions that Germany will force Romania to accept Hungarian territorial demands for Transylvania were voiced in Hungarian political quarters today as Romanian Premier Ion Gigurtu and Foreign Minister Mihail Manolescu sped to Salzburg, Germany, for a talk with Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

After discussing the future of their country with German leaders tomorrow, the Romanian statesmen will go to Rome to confer with Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano.

After Von Ribbentrop sees the Romanians, he will confer with the Bulgarian premier and foreign minister, with special attention to Bulgarian claims on Romania for South Dobruja.

Date of actual cession of Transylvania to Hungary remains uncertain. But it was stated that Romania, after she is carved up, will enjoy security under protection of Rome and Berlin.

The fact that Slovakian representatives also have been invited to Germany over the weekend gave added weight to the impression here that Hitler is determined to effect a full Balkan settlement before Germany throws her full military weight against England.

Budapest authorities said Germany is now "supreme judge" of the smaller southeastern European states. They added that absence of an invitation to Yugoslav statesmen to visit Germany shows the Italo-German alliance desires "profound changes" in

GERMANS ADMIT BRITISH PLANES DAMAGE CITIES

NEW YORK, July 25—Sandwiched between threats of destruction awaiting Britain, the German radio virtually admitted today that several Reich cities have suffered heavily in the war.

Columbia Broadcasting System in New York picked up this item from an official German broadcast:

"The Fuehrer has ordered reconstruction of the cities of Oldenburg, Posen, Saarbruecken and Koenigsburg, where parks and public buildings will be built."

Recent British broadcasts and communiques have mentioned these towns as among objectives of the British Air Force.

LONDON, July 25—German air raids on heavily fortified Britain diminished in intensity today—a fact immediately linked by observers with official announcement of 1,000 British attacks on German-occupied territory within the last three months.

The inference was that the terrific British raids may have played a signal role in cutting down the striking power of the Nazi air force. The British forays included 161 raids on industrial points, 229 on airfields, 258 on military objectives, 275 on enemy communications and 66 on warship anchorages.

Except for appearance of a number of German planes over southwestern England, there had been no repetition up to an early hour this afternoon of yesterday's intensive Nazi activity. German raiders kept clear of the British Isles during the night.

It was the first time since large-scale air attacks against Britain began that no raiders had appeared throughout an entire night.

But while they stayed away from English soil, the Nazi raiders twice attacked a shipping convoy in the North Sea this morning. Warships escorting the merchant vessels sent up an anti-aircraft barrage which drove off the attackers without suffering a loss.

American Planes Used

Early today the air ministry revealed that the Germans are using American warplanes captured in France in attacks on Britain. Recounting 24 hours of fighting around Britain's coast, the ministry disclosed that two fleets of American Chance-Vought dive-bombers, piloted by Germans, were

U. S. TO PROVIDE MANY AIRPLANES FOR BRITISH USE

WASHINGTON, July 25—The United States has agreed to a British proposal that American industry supply 3,000 military airplanes monthly for Great Britain, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau asserted today.

Morgenthau said high government officials told the British purchasing mission the United States will study methods of placating orders and obtaining deliveries, which would begin by January 1941.

The secretary told his press conference the British officials were "not worried" about finances because "they've got plenty of money."

Morgenthau asserted the British purchases would be of "tremendous importance" from the standpoint of American defense and industrial interests. He said it was expected the British would spend "vast sums of money."

Army Engineers Quoted As Saying Site Suitable For Munitions Job

A press association story from Washington, Thursday, declared that army experts consider the Whisler-Kingston district site as the only one visited in southern Ohio that would be suitable for a munitions plant.

War department surveys, it was reported, disclosed that the other proposed sites in the area were not satisfactory because of scarcity of necessary facilities such as water. The Pickaway County site is flat enough and has water.

Likewise, several railroads including Norfolk and Western, Pennsylvania, Chesapeake and Ohio and Baltimore and Ohio run close enough to provide transportation.

Approval, it was reported from Washington, has been withheld, however, pending further investigation.

The Piqua-Troy district is being considered also for the munitions plant.

Residents of the Whisler-Kingston community said Thursday that two army engineers visited the proposed site Wednesday and left in the evening declaring they would probably return early next week.

A meeting of district farmers, scheduled for Wednesday evening in Chillicothe, was delayed until after the engineers make another visit to the district, it was said.

The injury, which at first appeared serious, proved on examination to consist of two chipped teeth and a slight bruise.

Feller had been catching flies in the outfield and was trotting back to the dugout when he was hit.

European Bulletins

LONDON—Walls of Moscow are plastered with announcements that men between the ages of 19 and 50 in the Soviet Union who have not yet registered must register for military service during the first week of September, the London Daily Telegraph said today. The age limit for military duty is raised from 40 to 50. All women in the same age group must re-register for war services, the paper said.

WASHINGTON—The United States might be forced to purchase the British fleet if it is sent to Canada, members of the Foreign Policy Association predicted today. In an extensive survey of the possible effects of a Nazi victory in Europe, association experts also belittled fears that the United States is in danger of invasion. If the British fleet is dispatched to Canada, the United States must decide whether to enter the war or whether to use the English naval force for the defense of the Western Hemisphere, they reported.

Forecaster A. J. Knarr said in Chicago: "There should be real relief tonight. A cool air mass is due in Chicagoland, and the wind should shift to the East and Northeast. After that I think temperatures should be moderate for several days."

Forecasts for such states as Michigan, Wisconsin, the Dakotas, Iowa and Nebraska, which bore the brunt of the heat yesterday, also were for cooler today or tonight.

U. S. BLOCKS OIL SCHEDULED FOR USE OF SPANISH

WASHINGTON, July 25—Formation of a new U. S. policy apparently aimed at blocking oil trans-shipments to Germany came to light today when the Treasury Department's office of merchant ship-movements denied clearance to two tankers at Port Arthur, Tex., loaded with oil for Spain.

The vessels, the Aryan and the Nevada, both operated by the Texas Co., were said to be loaded with approximately 200,000 barrels of oil.

A month ago, the maritime commission took a similar step when it denied an application for a temporary transfer of charter on three tankers sought by a Spanish company for oil shipments of a torpedo."

Alexander said that all precautions had been taken to make the neutral character of the Meknes fully apparent. These include an advance warning to the French government representatives that the ship would leave Southampton yesterday for Marseilles.

The Meknes sank in four or five minutes after the attack. One thousand survivors reached England safely. Alexander revealed "but the death-toll may be as high as 300."

The passengers and crew, Alexander said, were given but five minutes to take to the boats. Each time she tried to signal her name and the nature of her passengers, the ship was again fired on, he said.

LISBON, Portugal, July 25—After arriving safely in Lisbon, David Coster, 32-year-old American volunteer ambulance driver of the American field service in France, today gave a graphic description of the horrors of aerial bombing during the evacuation.

One of four Americans who were reported killed on May 23, Coster said he and the other Americans actually were captured by the Germans and taken to Brussels as prisoners. Later they were released.

Coster named only one of the other Americans captured with him, George F. J. King, an American married to a British girl and a resident of London.

King and the other American drivers are safe, Coster said, adding he believed they were still in Brussels.

clared, was to work out a compromise; and Bankhead was his choice.

Coming from the second son of the President, the Mississippi delegates naturally considered the information straight from the White House and spread the word. When it reached worried Administration floor leaders they rushed to Senator Jimmy Byrnes, who, from the rostrum, was directing Wallace's fight. Jimmy dashed for a nearby phone and told the President what had happened.

Roosevelt's reply was that he hadn't talked to Elliott in over a month, so naturally could not have told him what he claimed.

"I am for Wallace and no one else," Roosevelt added. "Further, you have my authority to state that if he is not nominated, I won't run."

After Byrnes transmitted this message to the Texas delegation, Elliott piped down.

Note—When Wallace, at 2 a.m., immediately after his hard-won victory, telephoned the President and thanked him, Roosevelt advised that he immediately see Bankhead, Farley, Jesse Jones and McNutt and thank them for their sportsmanship. The President personally telephoned McNutt and commended him as a "gallant soldier who performed a great public service tonight."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Leaders of the California "ham and egg" pension movement, three times turned down by the voters, are secretly proposing the GOP on campaign alliance. John T. Jones, Maryland United Mine Workers official, whom John L. Lewis installed as head of Labor's Nonpartisan League after New Dealer Eli Oliver quit, is a lifelong registered Republican. Representative Jed Johnson, Okla., was boasting to his colleague Representative Mike Monroney how his talented nine-year-old daughter, Joan, had made speeches for him in the recent primary. "Now I understand why you won by such a big majority," laughed Monroney.

Recorder Reports Acreage In Pickaway County Worth $80.23

DEEDS SHOW INCREASE

Only 12 Leases On Record For Fiscal Year, 11 Under 1938-39

Value of farm lands in Pickaway County averaged $80.23 an acre for the year ending June 30, as compared with last year's average of $79.93, according to figures reported by Mrs. Florence T. Campbell, county recorder.

Number of deeds recorded on agricultural lands, corporate lands and city lots was 655, a marked increase over last year's figures.

Twelve leases were recorded, compared with 23 for last year, a decline occurring in both agricultural lands and city lots.

This year's mortgages totaled $802,655.54 while last year's amounted to $854,942.71. Mortgages on city, town and village lots declined from 232 to 180; those on farm lands remained about the same, and those on lands within corporate limits increased from 52 to 46.

Total mortgage cancellations this year amounted to $644,65.86 while last year's cancellations were $735,185.87. Less mortgage cancellations were reported on both agricultural lands and on city lots.

WASHINGTON C. H., July 25— Land valuation in Fayette County has increased from $71.85 an acre for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to $79.30 last year, according to the annual report of F. E. Whiteside, Fayette County recorder.

AMERICAN WHO ASSISTED FRANCE REACHES LISBON

LISBON, Portugal, July 25— After arriving safely in Lisbon, David Coster, 32-year-old American volunteer ambulance driver of the American field service in France, today gave a graphic description of the horrors of aerial bombings during the evacuation.

One of four Americans who were reported killed on May 23, Coster said he and the other Americans actually were captured by the Germans and taken to Brussels as prisoners. Later they were released.

Coster named only one of the other Americans captured with him, George F. J. King, an American married to a British girl and a resident of London.

King and the other American drivers are safe, Coster said, adding he believed they were still in Brussels.

SALESMAN, 59, DEAD
COLUMBUS, July 25—A verdict of suicide was returned today in the death of Fred H. Morris, 39-year-old packing company salesman, whose body was found lying on a mattress on a bedroom floor at his home in nearby Reynoldsburg. Coroner Edward E. Smith said Morris ended his life with chloroform. He had been despondent over ill health.

clared, was to work out a compromise; and Bankhead was his choice.

Coming from the second son of the President, the Mississippi delegates naturally considered the information straight from the White House and spread the word. When it reached worried Administration floor leaders they rushed to Senator Jimmy Byrnes, who, from the rostrum, was directing Wallace's fight. Jimmy dashed for a nearby phone and told the President what had happened.

Roosevelt's reply was that he hadn't talked to Elliott in over a month, so naturally could not have told him what he claimed.

Senator Holt in Drive To Put Congressmen Into Training Also

DEBATE BECOMES HOT

Norris Believes Standing Force Of 370,000 Big Enough For U. S.

WASHINGTON, July 25—Declaring public officials "have no right to exempt themselves from patriotic duties," Sen. Holt (D) W. Va., was preparing legislation today to place members of congress under the military conscription bill.

Holt announced his intention to offer an amendment to the conscription bill to tighten the exemption clause as Sen. Norris (IR) Nebr. warned the plan to draft men between the ages of 18 and 65 for military and home defense service will make the nation "warlike."

Sen. Hinton (D) Ind., voicing the general opinion of proponents of the legislation, said "people are convinced that the emergency requires conscription." He added that "it is not a question of actually calling up millions on millions of men, but of getting the nation's manpower registered and trained if it proves necessary."

The bill, designed to conscript 24,000,000 men between the ages of 21 and 45 for selective military training, was subjected to spirited debate among members as the senate military affairs committee expected to soon report it to the senate favorably, and the house military affairs committee continued public hearings.

Minton Plan Beaten

Holt's move to place members of congress under the program was made when it was disclosed a similar motion by Minton was defeated by the senate committee.

"If we are going to conscript the nation's manpower in peacetime for military service," Holt said, "we ought to include the male members of congress. We are not indispensable to the nation. We could be spared for a year's military training."

Holt and Norris questioned the need at this time to discard voluntary training for conscription.

Asserting that an enemy, attempting to invade the United States, would first have to destroy our navy and air force, Norris said a standing army of 375,000 men would suffice as a nucleus for "the training of a greater army for defense."

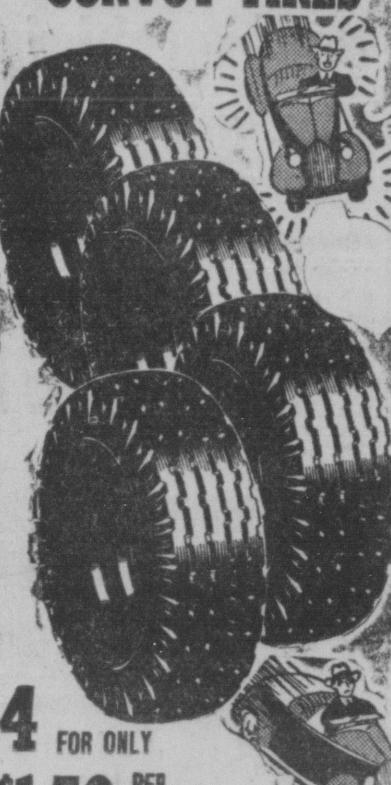

"It does not take a lifetime to train a soldier to fight," Norris said. "The American soldiers in the World War, it is admitted, after a training in many cases of but a few months, were able to compete in all respects with the men who had been trained for a lifetime."

Danger of Navy Fall

Norris said "the only possibility of the success of an invading army at the present time, or even in the near future, would be if Hitler succeeded in conquering England and securing the British navy."

He said that under the proposed program, if carried on for several years, "we would become warlike, and when we had become warlike, there would be no doubt but that we would soon be fighting with somebody."

R. A. F. TAKES BIG TOLL OF PLANES IN 1,000 RAIDS

Night Passes Without Any Activity After Bitter Battle During Day

One of the American-made ships was shot down into the English Channel, the communiqué said. It was among 14 German planes shot down yesterday. Four British planes were lost, two while bombing German objectives and two in defense of Britain.

The American planes were described as the Chance-Vought 156 type, believed to be similar to some United States naval dive-bombers.

(There ships are described by "Jane's All the World's Aircraft" as 2-seater scout bomber biplanes fitted with 750-horsepower Pratt and Whitney engines. They are combined scouting and bombing planes.)

The air ministry said that yesterday British fighters and anti-aircraft batteries were constantly beating off many types of planes, including "even new American aircraft which the Germans captured from the French."

The communiqué added:

"Chance-Vought 156 dive bombers, accompanied by Messerschmitts, were twice encountered by Spitfires in the morning. In the first meeting one Chance-Vought and two Messerschmitts crashed into the sea. The Chance-Vought fell into a spin with pieces flying from it."

"In a second meeting Spitfires battled Messerschmitts and Chance-Voughts. One Messerschmitt plunged down out of control and one Chance-Vought staggered away with badly damaged wing."

"From the beginning to the end this was a Spitfire day, in contrast to the many recent Hurricane victories. Spitfires fought the day's biggest air battle Wednesday morning."

"While flying at 7,000 feet... they spotted 18 German bombers 2,000 feet below. The bombers were in arrowhead formations of three, with three Messerschmitts above, three behind and 12 Messerschmitts and a formation of Heinkel 113 fighters covering them up."

Life Raft Used

The Spitfire pilots attacked in a line from behind and one Messerschmitt burst into flames after receiving a fraction of a second's machine gun burst. The German pilot parachuted, holding a rubber dinghy in his arms. This is the first instance in which it is known that the Messerschmitts carried this kind of protection (life rafts).

"Later in the day six Spitfires of the same squadron saved a convoy from attack, chasing off 12 Dornier bombers."

While beating off the German raids, the R. A. F. also launched strong counter-raids against German airfields.

The British port and naval base at Haifa, Palestine, took a severe drubbing from enemy bombers, presumably Italian, which dropped nearly 10 bombs on the Haifa region, killing 46 persons and wounding 88, mostly civilians. It was the second raid suffered by the Holy Land city since the war began.

The British naval base at Alexandria, Egypt, also was bombed sporadically this morning, but no damage was reported. Malta, British Mediterranean stronghold, was bombed twice yesterday, but damage was slight and there were no casualties, according to a Reuters dispatch.

In London it was understood Minister of Economic Warfare Hugh Dalton shortly will announce extension of the British blockade to cover the entire western coasts of Europe and South Africa.

Under this extension, all ships proceeding to such ports without British "navigators" may be halted.

With events moving forward speedily in the Balkans toward further dismemberment of Romania, with Hungary and Bulgaria slated to get Transylvania and southern Dobruja, the London Evening News reported that Turkey was reinforcing her armed forces. According to this report, Turkey is calling up the classes of 1911, 1912, and 1913 for military service today. Twenty divisions of troops are based in European Turkey, the newspaper said.

BERLIN, July 25.—Sinking of an 18,000 ton British armed merchant steamer by a German torpedo boat was announced today in the communiqué of the Nazi high command which said:

"Advancing against the British south coast, one of our speed launches sank an armed merchant steamer of 18,000 tons south of Portland by firing a torpedo.

"Despite bad weather, German combat planes attacked British shipping in the channel and on the coast of East Britain, as well as industrial plants in southeast Britain and Scotland.

"As already announced, a convoy of five merchantmen with a total tonnage of 17,000 tons was destroyed in the course of this action. Three additional merchant vessels received such serious bomb hits that their loss must be expected.

"Attacks were directed against the Vickers airplane works at Weybridge, where four enemy airplanes on the ground were destroyed. Industrial works at Great Yarmouth and Glasgow were among other points attacked.

"In the course of attacks on British convoys fierce air engagements took place on various occasions between our craft and British combat planes, during which six enemy machines were shot down.

"On the night of July 24-25, enemy flights again were made into North Germany. No damage was done by bomb attacks.

"The enemy's total losses of airplanes yesterday amounted to ten. Six were destroyed in air engagements and four on the ground. Six of our own airplanes are missing."

Norris' Home Torrid

Temperatures of 109, occurring in Arizona and Nebraska, were the highest officially reported yesterday, but an unofficial high of 120 degrees was reported for McCook, Neb., the home of U. S. Senator George W. Norris.

Another unofficial reading placed the temperature in Long Pine, Neb., at 116, while Omaha set an all-time record for July 24 with a temperature of 107. Lincoln, Neb., the capital, sweltered in 110-degree heat, and Fremont and Omaha were forced to restrict water usage by a threatened shortage.

Pumping stations in many midwestern cities could not keep up with the demand for water. Some "rationed" water, while others forbade sprinkling lawns. In Chicago it was an all-time record of 1,336,950,000 gallons of water was pumped yesterday.

Chicago Area Hit

The temperature at Chicago reached a maximum of 104 degrees, and readings in nearby towns were among the highest in the country. These included 113 at Mundelein, 112 at Antioch and Fox Lake, 111 at Barrington and 110 at Libertyville and Wheaton.

The extent of the crop damage was variously estimated at from moderate to serious, but experts agreed that the situation will become critical for midwest farmers unless they get rain soon. Some sectional showers were forecast.

A total of more than 250 deaths, including those from drowning, have been attributed directly or indirectly to the heat.

Cincinnati reported a high of 98 degrees as the death of F. William Stechow, 73-year-old retired hardware dealer, was recorded. He was the fourth Cincinnati to die in the current heat wave.

Youngstown reported a high of 96 degrees Sandusky 100; Dayton, 95; Toledo, 94; Buckus, 95 and downtown Cleveland 89.

Two more deaths due to heat prostration, another drowning and an apparent drowning were reported in the Cleveland area as the temperature rose to 97 at Cleveland airport and 92 downtown.

Latest victims of heat prostration were Hyman L. Myer, 56, who collapsed last night and was pronounced dead in a hospital, and Joseph Kerutis, 70, who died of the heat while at work in a factory.

Ronald Howard Ponting, 15, drowned while swimming in Rocky River, and Dan Zimmerman, 19, disappeared while swimming with friends in Lake Erie.

The Lancastria went down at its anchorage off St. Nazaire soon after it had completed embarkation of personnel for evacuation.

Following a half hour ineffectual aircraft attack, the huge luxury liner was struck by a salvo of bombs. She immediately took a heavy list which severely hampered launching of her lifeboats.

The Lancastria capsized and finally sank within thirty minutes of being struck. The majority of survivors were picked up by small craft engaged in ferrying other personnel from the docks to the ship, which had been converted into a troop carrier.

British officials said that great difficulty was being encountered in estimating the exact number of casualties in view of the circumstances under which the evacuation was being carried out. Survivors paid highest tribute to the magnificent courage displayed by the ship's crew of all ranks.

The Lancastria was launched in 1922 and was assigned to the trans-Atlantic run up to the outbreak of war. Her home port was Liverpool.

SEVEN OF LUXEMBOURG'S RULING FAMILY IN U. S.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 25.—Fleeing from totalitarian invasion, seven members of the ruling family of Luxembourg—formerly the world's tiniest democratic state—today reached the shores of the United States, the world's largest democracy.

Disembarking from the navy light cruiser, U. S. S. Trenton, after a nine-day voyage from Lisbon, Portugal, Prince-Consort Felix and son, Thomas Michael of Circleville visited Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Thomas Thursday.

Mr. Ballard, who through her attorney was making arrangements to surrender, denied the charges of the government and said she would "accept the challenge of the United States government to show the divine truth of the mighty 'I Am' presence."

"This ascended master activity of the 'I Am' is educational and patriotic," she declared.

Regular services were held at the organization's palatial church last night with Mrs. Ballard broadcasting as usual. She made no mention in her radio talk of the indictments.

The cult has some 10,000 followers in Los Angeles alone, and branches are maintained in Chicago, San Francisco, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Cleveland, Denver, Salt Lake City, Fort Worth, Dallas and West Palm Beach.

The indictment listed 15 counts of mail fraud and one of conspiracy. The supercilious were accused of selling through the mailings, tokens, books, magazines, etc. published by the Ballard-owned and Ballard-organized "St. Germain Foundation," an Illinois corporation.

Proceeds of the entertainment will go toward sending some scouts to camp at Tar Hollow.

1941 FARM PLAN BASED ON SOIL CONSERVATION

New Ground-Building Ideas
To Be Stressed During
Program Next Year

DEFENSE BEING CITED
Many Suggestions Voiced
At Conference For
Participants

COLUMBUS, July 25 — Ohio farmers will have an opportunity to practice more conservation in 1941, following the adoption by the National AAA Conference in Washington recently of new soil building practices to be incorporated in the 1941 AAA farm program, Elmer F. Kruse, Ohio Triple-A Chairman, said this week.

Ohio delegates joined with others to urge strengthening of the Ever-Normal Granary and giving local committeemen more opportunity to adapt the AAA farm program to individual farm requirements.

In addition to the new soil-building practices, the conference recommended continuation of the grant-of-aid program whereby farmers may receive advances of lime, TVA superphosphate, and other materials necessary for soil conservation purposes. Payments for these materials are made by deducting the cost from the applicant's benefit payment. This provision is especially important to owners of small Ohio farms who do not have sufficient funds to purchase these materials.

Commenting on the AAA loan program, Mr. Kruse said "The Ever-Normal Granary system should be strengthened since the loan program and soil conservation both are vital in a national defense program. The farm program has been faced with many tests, and today the greatest test is that of preparedness. Farmers are ready with an effective working farm program, an abundance of food in the Ever-Normal Granary, and soil that will produce."

Other recommendations presented at the conference included that crop insurance be extended to corn and tobacco as soon as the necessary data and legislative authority are available, that the minimum payment of $20 per farm be continued in 1941, that the 1941 sugar beet acreage allotments be on a county basis instead of the factory district basis, that the commercial vegetable program be continued, and that the maturity dates of the wheat loans be staggered.

These recommendations approved by the conference were submitted by farm committeemen from the 48 states. Mr. Kruse believes this participation by committeemen will build a farm program to the liking of most farmers.

Reports Of Fatal Blast In Canal District Denied

BALBOA, C. Z., July 25—United States army intelligence officers, Canal Zone police and Panama authorities sought today to establish responsibility for an unfounded rumor that 60 workmen had been killed in an alleged mysterious blast at the Pedro Miguel locks in the Panama Canal.

The false rumor was circulated late yesterday, spreading through the Canal Zone and Republic of Panama like wildfire, causing utmost confusion among relatives of laborers employed in bombing and other construction work in the military zone.

Later officials announced that the explosion report was completely without basis.

Some quarters attributed the rumor to "fifth column" activities.

A police official revealed, however, that there have been a number of minor accidents recently as the work of bomb-proofing the Pedro Miguel locks progressed, causing some difficulty with the laborers.

This source said an official investigation will look into the possibility that "known spies may be attempting to scare the laborers away from this vital project."

ANNUAL POTATO FIELD DAY SET FOR AUGUST 8

COLUMBUS, July 25 — Ohio's annual potato field day will be held Thursday, August 8, on the farm of Virgil Royer near Arcanum in Darke County, and the all-day program will include features for men, women and children.

Mr. Royer is one of the leading potato producers of the state, handles about 12,000 bushels of certified seed each year, sprays his own fields and those of neighbors, and has a 20,000-bushel storage house to hold potatoes when necessary. Twenty-three acres of ground will be available for parking automobiles and a similar sized field will contain machinery exhibits.

The women, in a session of their own, will hear Mrs. Herbert White, Columbus, review "Life in Denmark," and the Darke County Rural Women's Chorus will present several songs. A style review staged jointly by 4-H club members and vocational home economics students probably will draw attention from men as well as women.

Claude Shelton, Galion, president of the Ohio Potato and Vegetable Growers' Association, will introduce as speakers Frank Hussey, veteran potato grower from Presque Isle, Maine, and Earl Tussing, specialist in vegetable growing, Ohio State University. The speakers will discuss production and marketing.

Visitors will have a chance to inspect 23 acres of Irish Cobbler, Chippewa, and Katahdin potatoes growing under farm conditions. The potatoes will show the results of fertilization, varieties, and spraying.

1941 FARM PLAN BASED ON SOIL CONSERVATION

New Ground-Building Ideas
To Be Stressed During
Program Next Year

DEFENSE BEING CITED

Many Suggestions Voiced
At Conference For
Participants

COLUMBUS, July 25 — Ohio farmers will have an opportunity to practice more conservation in 1941, following the adoption by the National AAA Conference in Washington recently of new soil building practices to be incorporated in the 1941 AAA farm program, Elmer F. Kruse, Ohio Triple-A Chairman, said this week.

Ohio delegates joined with others to urge strengthening of the Ever-Normal Granary and giving local committeemen more opportunity to adapt the AAA farm program to individual farm requirements.

In addition to the new soil-building practices, the conference recommended continuation of the grant-of-aid program whereby farmers may receive advances of lime, TVA superphosphate, and other materials necessary for soil conservation purposes. Payments for these materials are made by deducting the cost from the applicant's benefit payment. This provision is especially important to owners of small Ohio farms who do not have sufficient funds to purchase these materials.

Commenting on the AAA loan program, Mr. Kruse said "The Ever-Normal Granary system should be strengthened since the loan program and soil conservation both are vital in a national defense program. The farm program has been faced with many tests, and today the greatest test is that of preparedness. Farmers are ready with an effective working farm program, an abundance of food in the Ever-Normal Granary, and soil that will produce."

Other recommendations presented at the conference included that crop insurance be extended to corn and tobacco as soon as the necessary data and legislative authority are available, that the minimum payment of $20 per farm be continued in 1941, that the 1941 sugar beet acreage allotments be on a county basis instead of the factory district basis, that the commercial vegetable program be continued, and that the maturity dates of the wheat loans be staggered.

These recommendations approved by the conference were submitted by farm committeemen from the 48 states. Mr. Kruse believes this participation by committeemen will build a farm program to the liking of most farmers.

The creative energies will be under fine impetus for accomplishing definite and exalted ambitions, moderated by application, sound judgment and practical restraints, although impelled to rather dynamic impetuosity which might prove detrimental.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very lively and exciting time, with much stirring over new projects or ambitions of a highly skillful and constructive quality. The energies are quickened to fine initiative, with those in prestige and standing cooperative.

A child born on this day should have splendid creative talents and energies with high ambitions and practical incentives, even though optimistic, with expansive and large visioned ideals.

NO NEED FOR EXODUS

FRANKNESS and courage distinguish Winston Churchill's conduct of the war so far. When he makes a mistake he is not afraid to admit it. He doesn't waste his own or the nation's time and energy trying to save face.

So when Churchill tells the House of Commons that the proposed exodus of children to the Dominions and the United States turns out to be unnecessary and undesirable he is listened to with respect. He said:

"I must frankly admit that the full bearings of this question were not appreciated by the British Government at the time it was first raised. It was not foreseen that the mild countenance given to this plan would lead to a movement of such dimensions, and that a crop of alarmist and depressing rumors would follow at its tail, detrimental to the interests of national defense."

"I take full responsibility for the steps originally taken, and I ask for the indulgence of the House on account of the many difficulties through which we have been passing."

A good many Americans who have been taking sober second thought about the matter will agree with Mr. Churchill. Sending a few thousands of young people to the homes of relatives or friends or even to those of open-souled strangers sounded like a good idea. It probably still is a good idea. But turning the forces of administration which should be concentrated on defense over to the problems of wholesale evacuation is not the same thing. Such matters as those of shipping, of examining the type of home to which every child goes, of seeing that they are not exploited, raise difficulties of vast magnitude. And the breaking up of families, the difficulties of reuniting them later, are not to be lightly regarded.

HORSES IN TRUCKS

TIME was when the horse was the accepted means of transportation all over the West. But now it's different. Along the big highways the Forest Rangers load their horses onto trailers and drive to the points where they have to leave for roads and trails not accessible to motor cars. The Rangers cover their beats far more quickly in this modern manner. They can cover ground in a day or two which formerly took a week or more. Throughout 107 of the forest districts the new horse trailers will be used.

Pretty soft for the horses to be getting all those free rides? Sure. And for the men, too. But there's plenty of hard work left both for man and beast in the Forest Service. And the greater protection given the forests by the increased speed of covering the ranges is a decided gain. Every American profits by conservation of natu-

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to another scorcher and thoughts turned to the three coolest spots in the village, Mason's store basement, the hall way at the city building and George Gerhart's favored nook at the courthouse. Received a note from a friend who is up in Ontario and he pens that the weather there also is hot, almost unbearable. Most folks believe that a few hundred miles makes a lot of difference in summer temperature, but my experience is the opposite. I lived at one time not far from the Canadian border in the Northwest and the temperature range there was from 100 or more in the summer to 60 below in the winter. I have almost suffocated in Canada and almost frozen in the South. When the weather is hot here it usually is hot north of us until one reaches the Hudson Bay country, and who wishes to go that far?

Came a post card from Pat Kirwin, who is on vacation in Arizona. Had visited Point Imperial on the north rim of Grand Canyon. Would have enjoyed being there to watch Pat as he caught his first glimpse of that magnificent spectacle. From that point may be seen the canyon, the Painted Desert and House Rock Valley. Gorgeous. Pat wrote that "The natives here never heard of a third term or Hitler. It's a great experience to be out of the world for even short time."

Visited the Coffee Club and Chatted with Charlie Smith and told him that the canal territory would be a good spot right now for the training of his rabbit dogs. Every time I am in that vicinity I see plenty of rabbits.

Came to the very definite conclusion that threshing in such weather as this is one branch of endeavor that never will be cluttered by my presence. Wonder how they stand it?

"Any excuse?" asked the bailiff.

"Aye, yer honor. I got intae bad company."

"What sort of bad company?"

"Weel, I got a present o' a bottle o' whisky, and I met two teetotallers."

MAGNESIUM FOR DEFENSE

WASHINGTON — Not many people knew it, but Andrew Mellon's Aluminum Corporation of America was one of the U. S. concerns cooperating with Germany to maintain high prices on certain raw materials necessary for national defense.

The Aluminum Corporation controlled the supply of magnesium for the United States. This metal is used as an alloy in substitute for aluminum in the manufacture of airplane parts. It is absolutely essential to the airplane industry. Yet the Magnesium Development Company, jointly owned by the Aluminum Corporation of America and the I. G. Farbenindustrie of Germany, has enjoyed a world monopoly of this metal.

The I. G. Farbenindustrie, of course, is now completely Nazified and dominated by the German Government. Under the joint control, Mr. Mellon's Company in the United States agreed to produce only 2,000 tons of magnesium a year, while Mr. Hitler's company in Germany produced 10,000 tons annually. As a result, prices were high.

Not long ago, the Department of Justice began to probe the monopoly holdings of raw materials and the degree of cooperation existing between American firms and German. Details of this probe were published in The Washington Merry-Go-Round.

The other day, John W. Davis, attorney for the Aluminum Corporation of America, came in to see Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, who has done more to reduce prices than any other man in America, and promised him the full cooperation of his client. He said the Aluminum Corporation would be glad to produce magnesium for national defense purposes, and cooperate in every way possible.

MOTHER KNOWS BEST

The morning after the Democratic convention nominated the President for a third term, Jim Farley called up his young son, Jimmy, at a camp in New Hampshire.

"How you, champ," he greeted the boy.

"Hi, dad, how did you make out last night?"

"I got licked."

"Well," was the comforting reply, "that will please mother."

NOTE—Jolly Mrs. Farley intensely dislikes Washington, long has wanted her husband to quit politics.

MY SON, MY SON

It didn't leak out at the time, but things got pretty hot for Elliott Roosevelt during the turbulent battle over Henry Wallace on the last night of the Chicago convention.

Although his father had declared for Wallace as vice presidential nominee, Elliott raged about the convention floor rooting for Speaker Bankhead. In the course of his operations, Elliott told members of the Mississippi delegation that his father had personally informed him that while he favored Wallace, Bankhead and McNutt also were acceptable.

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:
LINDA AVERY, a fashionist at a New York models' agency, starts to rebuild her romance with RONALD STAFFORD, her childhood sweetheart, who has "swung his way to fame as a trumpet" but SARAH MARKLEY, a wealthy glamor girl, is trying to capture Ronald for herself. Meanwhile ROBERT BARTON, young engineer, strikes up a friendship with Linda. HARRY ADAMS, society man, and TERRY ADAMS, society man, and CAROLINE PICKARD, who has been unable to find work. Life is complicated by MINA NEVINS, a famous actress, who is determined to marry Robert. She believes Linda is romancing with the young engineer.

YESTERDAY: Billie Anne, in love with Robert, lands in an airplane on the beach, where the young engineer is napping, and hurried Rob away with her. While Linda is watching the plane disappearing in the distance, Sarah sees the young engineer.

After all ships do reach the airports, you know, I'm sure this one will!"

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

THERE WAS a silence, a waiting, expectant hush, as Sarah's words died away on the warm, sun-scented air. Linda knew that she was expected to answer. But she did not want to.

Instead, she kept her eyes on the silver speck going northward in the far sky.

What did people want from life?

How did they know what they wanted? Life was so simple when the world was a wilderness and a man chose the girl he wanted, went forth to hew trees, raise crops, shoot game, while she stayed behind to plant a garden and keep something simmering in a kettle on a fire when he came back.

But now Ronald had a horn, a silver-toned, magic trumpet, and the feet of the world stepped to gayer music when he played and the hearts of the world—no, that wasn't true—just one heart, Sarah's, swung out of the world with him.

And Robert, who had been a fortress, a Rock of Gibraltar, had gone away with somebody else in an airplane.

"Airplanes never have accidents any more," Linda said at last. "I hear they are much safer—than boats."

Her green eyes met the blue eyes of the ex-deb and held them.

"For you, probably," Sarah answered, forgetting that she was the hostess. Then, swiftly, "I'm being an utter cad! Forgive me, or anyway, try to, won't you? You know what's wrong, and you won, so you're ahead."

Utter candor. Or maybe that was the new way, Linda reflected.

"I did look as though I'd never seen an airplane before," she said, trying to laugh lightly. "Ronnie, let's take a walk."

He arose at once and started with her down the beach. When he tried to speak, she shook her head.

"Don't say it. Then it will be easier for us to forget it. Sarah is upset and it's too bad. Maybe she got caught in her own web. Anyway, I'm sorry for her."

Heather candor. Or maybe that was the new way, Linda reflected.

"You're pretty swell," the man answered. "I've been doing some thinking, too. The show is closing soon and I'll be free. Linda, let's announce our engagement soon—tomorrow, when we get back."

This was what she had wanted. For this she had waited as the March weeks drifted into April and June followed May. But the old glory was dead. As suddenly as though a cold wind had blown out a red fire. Yet, life without Ronald—oh, no, no, no!"

It was because she was so tired, because she had borne so much that she had reached this stage of emotional fatigue, she told herself.

"Tomorrow—as soon as we can," she promised, but she felt no better. Maybe you wanted something, someone, tried to obtain it and make the pattern of a dream come true for so many years, that when you received the completion, the joy was gone. But it would come back. Always it would come back! For life was not fixed in an unchanging mold. It was liquid, flowing and love and dreams came back, just as the tides or the moon or spring.

But when she reached her own apartment the next morning the old elation had not returned, though Ronald was devoted and attentive. She slipped into a crushed rose linen frock, placed a cart wheel on her bright curls, plucked up white gloves and bag, and went to her office. She was early, for the boat had docked at six and she had left it as soon as she could. Ronald had come with her, though most of the house party were sleeping until much later.

It was around noon when her telephone rang. She sat up, alert, at the question that a drawing, strange masculine voice sent across the wires.

"Not in Manhattan. But this is good publicity for you. Young Stafford's all right and going far. Shall I release the pictures?"

"I don't know."

When Ronald called his voice was warm and reassuring. He didn't apologize because the secret was out. He stated it matter-of-factly, and his voice sounded happy.

For the first time in two days Linda felt better. Dusk was coming, and lights were shining in the buildings that marched along the skyline.

Watching the night come slowly to the city, from the wide windows of the office, she felt a deep peace and a sense of rhythm with the world. The week-end, the emerald ring, even Robert's going, were not important. Robert, she wondered if he and Billie Anne had done whatever Billie Anne wanted done.

She was still at the window when Mr. Bagley came from his inner office.

"Would you feel like resigning if I asked you to work overtime? The printer wants the cutlines for our new year book in the morning, and half of them aren't written. I have to dash now, but I'll be back around ten. If you would get busy and do some captions I won't forget."

He was a good employer. Linda's work was amusing and not strenuous, though sometimes it was nerve wracking. Tonight, though, she wanted to see Ronald.

But she said that she would stay. "Miss Ackerman, who helps when we are busy, is coming in pretty soon and give her anything to do you wish," the head of the agency said as he explained his purpose.

Linda knew Clarabell Ackerman well. She was a girl with dark brown hair, about Linda's own height and size. She was quiet and steady, removed from the tension of life, and tonight Linda felt a little sorry for her because she looked white and tired.

Because she wasn't hungry Linda decided to work for a while before eating. At nine o'clock she decided to cross the street to a coffee shop for a sandwich. The ringing of the telephone, shrill and a little ominous in the quiet office, brought her back from the door.

Checking Ills of Children

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

• THE PHYSICIAN who is dealing with children has a great advantage because he has youth—young, resilient, plastic material.

The best hope of preventive medicine is in attacking the greatest diseases of childhood. I have just had my attention called to some figures which show how much progress is being made along this line.

Three-fourths of the quarter-million annual deaths of American children can be prevented; 21 per cent of these deaths are due to curable diseases, while 56 per cent are due to preventable conditions.

NO NEED FOR EXODUS

FRANKNESS and courage distinguish Winston Churchill's conduct of the war so far. When he makes a mistake he is not afraid to admit it. He doesn't waste his own or the nation's time and energy trying to save face.

So when Churchill tells the House of Commons that the proposed exodus of children to the Dominions and the United States turns out to be unnecessary and undesirable he is listened to with respect. He said:

"I must frankly admit that the full bearings of this question were not appreciated by the British Government at the time it was first raised. It was not foreseen that the mild countenance given to this plan would lead to a movement of such dimensions, and that a crop of alarmist and depressing rumors would follow at its tail, detrimental to the interests of national defense."

"I take full responsibility for the steps originally taken, and I ask for the indulgence of the House on account of the many difficulties through which we have been passing."

A good many Americans who have been taking sober second thought about the matter will agree with Mr. Churchill. Sending a few thousands of young people to the homes of relatives or friends or even to those of open-souled strangers sounded like a good idea. It probably still is a good idea. But turning the forces of administration which should be concentrated on defense over to the problems of wholesale evacuation is not the same thing. Such matters as those of shipping, of examining the type of home to which every child goes, of seeing that they are not exploited, raise difficulties of vast magnitude. And the breaking up of families, the difficulties of reuniting them later, are not to be lightly regarded.

HORSES IN TRUCKS

TIME was when the horse was the accepted means of transportation all over the West. But now it's different. Along the big highways the Forest Rangers load their horses onto trailers and drive to the points where they have to leave for roads and trails not accessible to motor cars. The Rangers cover their beats far more quickly in this modern manner. They can cover ground in a day or two which formerly took a week or more. Throughout 107 of the forest districts the new horse trailers will be used.

Pretty soft for the horses to be getting all those free rides? Sure. And for the men, too. But there's plenty of hard work left both for man and beast in the Forest Service. And the greater protection given the forests by the increased speed of covering the ranges is a decided gain. Every American profits by conservation of natural resources whether he is conscious of it or not.

Received a note from a friend who is up in Ontario and he pens that the weather there also is hot, almost unbearable. Most folk believe that a few hundred miles makes a lot of difference in summer temperature, but my experience is the opposite. I lived at one time not far from the Canadian border in the Northwest and the temperature range there was from 100 or more in the summer to 60 below in the winter. I have almost suffocated in Canada and almost frozen in the South. When the weather is hot here it usually is hot north of us until one reaches the Hudson bay country, and who wishes to go that far?

Pat wrote that "The natives here never heard of a third term or Hitler. It's a great experience to be out of the world for even short time."

Here and there is a lot of Third Term talk, but public opinion hereabouts still is in the formative stage. It conceivably can swing either way. Not many persons, however, really believe the "draft" contention. What a mix-up is politics this year. A Republican running for vice president on the Democratic ticket and a Democrat running for president on the Republican ticket. Well, we shall see what we shall see in November. And plague take all the hypocrisy of which we will run afoul in the meantime.

THE CHARACTERS:
LINDA AVERY, receptionist at a New York models' agency, starts to rebuild her romance with Ronald

RONALD STAFFORD, her childhood sweetheart, who has been trying his way to fame on a trumpet, but

SARAH MARKLEY, wealthy glamor girl, is trying to capture Ronald for herself. Meanwhile

ROBERT BARTON, young engineer, is in a friendship with Linda. He introduced her to

TERRY ADAMS, publicity man, and Terry's sweetheart,

CAROLINE PICKARD, who has been unable to find work. Life is complicated.

MINA NEVINS, a famous actress, who is determined to marry Robert. She believes Linda is romancing with the young engineer.

YESTERDAY: Bill Anne, in love with Ronald, in an effort to win him back to the beach where the yacht party is picnicking, and hurries Rob away with her. While Linda is watching the play, she happens to overhear Sarah say: "Are you ill, Linda? After all, ships do reach the airports, you know. I'm sure this one will!"

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

THERE WAS a silence, a waiting, expectant hush, as Sarah's words died away on the warm, sun-scented air. Linda knew that she was expected to answer. But she did not want to.

Instead, she kept her eyes on the silver speck going northward in the far sky.

What did people want from life?

How did they know what they wanted? Life was so simple when the world was a wilderness and a man chose the girl he wanted, went forth to hew trees, raise crops, shoot game, while she stayed behind to plant a garden and keep something simmering in a kettle on a fire when he came at dusk.

But now Ronald had a horn, a silver-noted, magic trumpet, and the feet of the world stepped to gayer music when he played and the hearts of the world—no, that wasn't true—just one heart, Sarah's, swung out of the world with him.

And Robert, who had been a fortress, a Rock of Gibraltar, had gone away with somebody else in an airplane.

"Airplanes never have accidents any more," Linda said at last. "I hear they are much safer—than boats."

Her green eyes met the blue eyes of the ex-deb and held them.

"For you, probably," Sarah answered, forgetting that she was the hostess. Then, swiftly, "I'm being an utter cad! Forgive me, or anyway, try to, won't you? You know what's wrong, and you won, so you're ahead."

Utter candor. Or maybe that was the new way, Linda reflected.

"I did look as though I'd never seen an airplane before," she said, trying to laugh lightly. "Ronnie, let's take a walk."

up white gloves and bag, and went up to her office. She was early, for the boat had docked at six and she had left it as soon as she could. Ronald had come with her, though most of the house party were sleeping until much later.

The papers favored women who sat with their knees revealed.

She wrinkled her brows in perplexity. "But Mr. Bagley, I thought a girl announced her own engagement!"

"Not in Manhattan. But this is good publicity for you. Young Stafford's all right and going far. Shall I release the pictures?"

"I don't know."

When Ronald called his voice was warm and reassuring. He didn't apologize because the secret was out. He stated it matter-of-factly, and his voice sounded happy.

He was a good employer. Linda's work was amusing and not strenuous, though sometimes it was nerve wracking. Tonight, though, she was still at the window when Mr. Bagley came from his inner office.

Possibility Of All-West World Series Increases

NEW YORK, July 25.—An all west "World Series" loomed today as the Tigers and the Indians pulled away from the other teams in their battle for American League supremacy and the rampant Reds gave no indication of easing up in their almost faultless run towards a second National League flag.

With each passing day, the Yankees and the Red Sox, pre-season favorites in the junior circuit, continue to look worse, clearing the way for a ding-dong stretch battle between Cleveland and Detroit.

Meanwhile, Cincinnati, after taking the Dodgers three straight, seem to have broken down the morale of the only formidable opposition in their division.

Yesterday the Tigers maintained their one-half game margin over the Clevelanders by outlasting the Senators, 7 to 5, in a see-saw struggle. Big Hank Greenberg and Pinky Higgins turned the tide in favor of the home towners by cracking out their 18th and 12th homers of the season, respectively.

Meantime, the Indians eked out a 7 to 6 victory over the Athletics, but received the scare of their lives when Bob Feller was struck in the face by a ball thrown by Keith Monroe, a sandlotter who was working out with the Tribe during batting practice. After an examination, club officials reported the injury as not serious.

Lightning Strikes Stack Of

Farm Of Frank McGee

Little Relief Noticed As
Third Of Inch Of Rain
Strikes District

A thunderstorm in mid-afternoon Wednesday brought temporary relief to Circleville and Pickaway County residents as it pulled temperatures down 23 degrees, soaked withering corn fields with .35 inches of rain and brought the total rainfall for the month to 2.68 inches.

Agricultural experts reported that Wednesday's rain was extremely valuable to Pickaway County corn farmers who had watched their corn wither under temperatures which have been in the upper nineties for the last seven days. Rainfall for the month has been far below normal, experts say, and Ohio's corn crop, planted late and reduced by excessive rains in June which rotted much of the early plantings and prevented adequate cultivation, is now suffering greatly from the July "drought." Regular rains in the future will be necessary to bring the crop to a normal yield, they believe.

Lightning during Wednesday's storm struck a straw stack on the Frank McGee farm, ten miles west of Circleville on Route 56, burning it completely, but causing no damage to a granary or garage which stood near. Isaac Sells, tenant on the farm, stated that the stack contained 55 acres of wheat straw and had been threshed Tuesday.

The fire was reported by a neighbor at 3:45 p.m. who noticed the burning stack following a lightning flash. Fire Chief Palmer Wise stated that no insurance covered the damage. Sheriff's Deputies Bryan Custer and Robert Armstrong reported that the smoke from the burning stack blew across the road and slowed traffic considerably.

Weather observers Thursday predicted scattered showers and cooler weather by Friday night, as temperatures Thursday, which started at 74 degrees, began to creep into the nineties.

F. D. To Meet Wallace To Talk Of Campaign

WASHINGTON, July 25—President Roosevelt returned to Washington today to meet for the first time since the Chicago convention with his 1940 running mate, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

The Democratic standard bearers will map out their campaign strategy against the Republican ticket of Wendell L. Willkie and Senator Charles L. McNary at today's session.

Also, it was expected that Mr. Roosevelt would discuss with Wallace the choice of a campaign manager to succeed James A. Farley, who is retiring as Democratic national chairman on August 17. A committee of five from the national committee headed by Edward J. Flynn, Bronx leader, will wait on the President August 1 to determine his wishes in the matter. So far, the chief executive says he has given the appointment no thought.

Another matter bringing the President back to the capitol from a three-day stay at Hyde Park was the formal White House luncheon being tendered in honor of Prince Consort Felix of Luxembourg and his six children. The royal group from the tiny principality overrun by Germany arrived in the United States aboard the U. S. S. Trenton to take up temporary residence.

In advance of his meeting with Wallace, the President had denounced Republican demands that the Iowan should resign from the cabinet to make his vice-presidential run. Mr. Roosevelt rejected the opposition argument that Wallace should not be permitted to direct expenditure of large sums in farm benefits while making a national campaign. The chief executive pointed out that Herbert Hoover did not resign from the Coolidge cabinet in 1928, and he could see no difference between spending forty or fifty million dollars in Commerce department and spending two or three hundred millions in the Agriculture department.

Before the end of the week Mr. Roosevelt plans to see Jim Farley and find out when his 1932 and 1936 campaign manager wants to retire as postmaster general. They also will probably discuss the New York outlook as Farley is retaining the Democratic state chairmanship and has promised to support the third term ticket. Farley is expected to assume the presidency of the New York Yankee baseball club on September 1.

WOMAN SUFFERS HEAD INJURY IN ACCIDENT

Mrs. E. E. Leist, Chillicothe, received a bruised forehead, Wednesday afternoon when her head struck the windshield of a car in which she was riding, in an accident west of Laurelvile at the intersection of Routes 180 and 56. State Patrolman D. W. Miller reported that the car in which Mrs. Leist was a passenger, owned by N. P. According to the report, the Ratcliff car swerved to avoid striking an auto driven by Clyde Deffenbaugh, Route 1, Laurelvile, which was leaving the bridge.
